German Fleet Sinks British Submarine

ENGLISH IN BOARING SEA MOVE

By FREDERICK WERNER.
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.
BERLIN (via Amsterdam), April 22.—For the first time during the war, the British submarine fleet has made a counter move in force in the effort to destroy some of the big warships of the German navy. The attempt was unsuccessful, being broken up before an attack could be made, but was carried on with great daring in the face of what seemed almost certain destruction.
The British lost at least one of the underwater craft, and probably others, according to the Admiralty's official statement today.
The British submarines, which had entered Heligoland Bight, were attacked on April 17 by German ships, which sank at least one of them.
It was probably the intention of the submarines to attack the German fleet at Heligoland. This is the first reported activity of British submarines in this locality. It is not yet known how they evaded the German mine fields.
The statement issued by the Admiralty follows:
"British submarines were recently repeatedly observed in Heligoland Bight. They were attacked by the German forces. A British submarine was sunk on April 17. Probably several others were destroyed, but this is uncertain."
29 More Generals Retired by Joffre
PARIS, April 22.—Twenty-nine more French Generals have been placed either on the reserve or retired lists to make way for younger and more active men. The Official Journal contains names of sixteen Generals of division and eighteen Generals of brigade who have been relieved from active service.

Even Money That War Ends By October 30

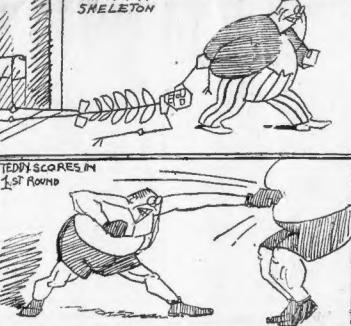

NEW YORK, April 22.—In New street yesterday $1,000 to $300 was offered that the war will end before December 30, 1915; $1,000 to $300 that it will end before November 30, and even money that it will end before October 30.
By the "end of the war" is meant a suspension of hostilities pending peace overtures.
Report 500 Perish in Danube Flood
By International News Service.
BUCHAREST, April 22.—The villages of Brila and Tulia each have been submerged by the flood waters of the Danube. Five hundred men, women and children are reported drowned. Intense is general in the flood district. Thousands are without food, their cattle having been drowned.
Holland May Have Envoy at Vatican
LONDON, April 22.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says the Netherlands has learned that Mr. Nolens has left for Rome on a mission for the Dutch government concerning the restoration of the Netherlands representation at the Vatican. It is understood Mr. Nolens will be the representative appointed.

ASK STATE TO CENSOR ALL FILMS

In a counter attack upon the efforts of a Nation, the Senate Committee on Ways and Means was urged today to establish a State censorship over all motion pictures exhibited in Massachusetts.
At a meeting held at the State House, the committee was urged to take action to prevent the exhibition of films which are "absolutely unfit for Sunday entertainment."
Commenting upon the lack of power to immediately prevent further productions of the big films during the reconstruction period, Attorney General Nathan said: "We have no power to go to the Mayor of Boston who are characterized by 'brimstone' when we go to the Police Commissioner. We are told that he is holding in authority. They do have control, but they maintain that it is our opinion. I am part of his very soul and cannot be moved by the law of this Commonwealth."
"CANNON," SAYS LEWIS.
In his first extended speech since the anti-foreigner was begun, former Assistant United States Attorney-General William H. Lewis, one of the most eloquent of the anti-foreigner, said today:

Red Sox in Their First Home Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
Fenway Park is gay with flags and bunting today, ready to welcome the Red Sox in the opening game of the American League championship season in this town. The Athletics, time-honored rivals, will be the opponents. Game called at 3 o'clock.
His Excellency, the Governor, will be there.
His Honor, the Mayor, will be there.
At least they have said they would be there.
The Mayor will toss out the new ball.
There will be two bands of music—one furnished by the management and the other supplied by the Royal Rooters, who will march to the park in force and sit in Section 4 of the grand stand as guests of President Lammie, and root as only they can root for the Red Sox.
And the Rooters' band will doubtless play that infernal song called "Tessie." To some minds this will be the only dull button on the baseball coat.
But, on the other hand, the Ninth Regiment Band, which is furnished by the management, will play a new composition, entitled "A Real Fellow," which it has dedicated to President Joseph J. Lammie, of the Red Sox.
There will be the usual opening day ceremonies—a parade by the players to flagpole in centre-field; the raising of the flag while the band plays "The Star Spangled Banner"; and all hands stand uncovered, the parade back to the diamond and then the preliminary practice. You can see it all in your eye right now.
The Red Sox are back in town tonight.

ROLLING AGAINST COLONEL

By International News Service.
SYRACUSE, April 22.—The real battle of wits, the most interesting portion of the sensational $50,000 Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial came today when Colonel Roosevelt took the stand for cross-examination.
The Colonel's roars, his high, falsetto laugh, the vigorous waving of his head and his sharp, staccato replies kept the packed court room at the highest pitch of attention.
The Colonel was at his best, and seemed to glory in the clash of brains. At times his mustache fairly bristled as he snapped out denials to some questions.
Before court reconvened today Justice Andrews ruled that that part of the libel report referring to graft from evil resorts in Albany could not be introduced.
This was technically a setback for Colonel Roosevelt, but Justice Andrews allowed Roosevelt to go into that part of the libel report which dealt with alleged crookedness in connection with State printing.
The ruling was handed down in a conference of the justice and lawyers of both sides.
READS FROM RAIN REPORT.
When court opened Attorney Van Buren for the defence read from the Rain report the parts admitted under the ruling. Mr. Roosevelt was then called for direct examination. This was brief and consisted simply of Mr. Roosevelt's story of how he wrote the statement on which Barnes bases his charges.
William M. Ivins, chief counsel for Barnes, began his cross-examination of the ex-President.
"What is your name?" asked Mr. Ivins.
"Were you a lawyer?" was asked by the witness stand. "I was not, but I never practiced. Early in my life I was a lawyer."
"What else did you do?"
"I was a cowboy in Montana," Mr. Ivins cut Mr. Roosevelt off saying: "We want no more of that. You have had many callings, have you not?"
"Yes, I've followed many vocations," laughed the Colonel, and all simultaneously interpreted Ivins.
"Yes," was the reply.
"Did you ever hold office?"
"Yes, I was elected to the Legislature of Montana in 1897, and would read a decision until tomorrow."

Alton Posse Hunts 2 Men on Girl's Clew

ALTON, N. H., April 22.—Armed posess will today begin a search of the surrounding woods for the two supposed tramps who attacked, drugged and gagged fourteen-year-old Evelyn Jones while she was walking along a lonely mountain road near the shores of Lake Winnepesaukee. The girl, who was left for dead, is now reported to be in a serious condition at her father's home.
The discovery of the girl's plight had aroused the entire community. It is the intention of the local authorities to capture the men either dead or alive.
The girl, lying bound and gagged near the shore of the lake, was found by a youth known as "Dummy" Varney. The boy was returning from a fishing trip. He quickly summoned aid and the girl was taken home. There she was revived sufficiently to tell her story.
She said the men seized her from behind and thrust a handkerchief in her mouth. She described one of the men as short and thick-set. The other she says was much taller.
English Trawler Sunk by Submarine
ALBANY, April 22.—The English trawler Aberdeen Envoys was shelled and sunk by a German submarine off the coast coast Wednesday night. The crew was rescued and landed today.
Sailors of the Envoys declared the German kept firing upon them while they were trying to launch their boats and even fired upon one of the small boats. They were picked up by the British ship.

EIGHT ICE HOUSES ARE DESTROYED

The plant of the Crystal Lake Ice Company in Newton Centre, including eight icehouses, an office building and 15,000 tons of ice, was destroyed by a general alarm fire today.
Miss Ella Turner, bookkeeper, was the fire heroine. When the office was threatened, she put the company books and papers in the safe, slammed the safe door shut, then began lugging out office furniture through the choking smoke.
Two stockholders of the Purdy Ice Company of Newton, organized by the Newton Centre Women's Club to manufacture artificial ice, had been negotiating for purchase of the Crystal Lake Ice Company. Final papers were to have been passed at 2 o'clock this afternoon.
HELP FROM OTHER TOWNS.
The general alarm brought help from Waltham, Weymouth, Watertown and Brookline. The fire swept through the ice plant in a roaring flash. The firemen devoted much effort to saving neighborhood property.
The B. & H. Hatch Coal Company's plant, across the street, caught twice, but was saved. A roof fire started on A. O. White's residence, No. 56 Norwood avenue, sparks were carried a half-mile by the stiff breeze.
The Crystal Lake Ice Company's plant was located on Centre street, between the Crystal Lake and the Crystal Lake, in Newton Centre. The total loss at the Crystal Lake Ice Company, estimated the total loss at $12,000 and the value of 15,000 tons of ice at $100,000.
FIREMAN BADLY HURT.
The melting of this ice removes about three-quarters of the supply cut for the Newtons.
Arthur McCarthy, of Engine 2 Company of Newtonville, was badly hurt. He was holding a hose at the front of the ice house, with Ernest Neal of Waltham and George Monk of Newtonville. McCarthy was caught in the crash. His legs were crushed. Neal and Monk dodged back from the falling timbers, then ran forward and pulled McCarthy out. The injured was taken to Newton Hospital.
The fire was discovered at 10 o'clock by a stationhouse. A fireman suddenly burst from one end of the burning icehouse, and was seen to be running toward the front of the ice house, with Ernest Neal of Waltham and George Monk of Newtonville. McCarthy was caught in the crash. His legs were crushed. Neal and Monk dodged back from the falling timbers, then ran forward and pulled McCarthy out. The injured was taken to Newton Hospital.

PLAN LIFE TERM PLEA FOR FRANK

ATLANTA, Ga., April 22.—Over the strong protest of Leo Frank, his attorneys have decided not to ask the prison commission to pardon their client, but will urge that death sentence be committed to imprisonment for life.

"I am not asking for mercy," Frank is quoted as saying in his counsel. "I am innocent and have been unjustly convicted. I want justice and vindication."

Although Frank's attorneys are fully confident their client is innocent, they are not sure of the justice for which he was convicted, they feel that in the face of the adverse action of the various courts of appeal, they could not hope for pardon.

LANNIGAN HEART SUIT NEARS END

The suit for $20,000 by Mrs. Maude Lannigan, of Lawrence, against her father-in-law, James P. Lannigan, for alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, James P. Lannigan, Jr., is expected to reach the jury in the Superior Court at Boston today.

Mrs. Lannigan testified she was married to the younger Lannigan in 1904. He died last year. After their marriage they went to live at her father-in-law's home, she testified, but she received a sour welcome. Members of the family ignored her, she said, and Mr. Lannigan, the defendant, gradually influenced her husband against her, so that he deserted her.

When her husband died she was not allowed to see the body at the defendant's home, she told the court. The funeral arrangements were made without consultation with her, and she had to pay for a carriage at the time of the funeral, she declared.

School Board Votes to Abolish Office

The office of assistant superintendent of schools, made vacant by the death of Maurice P. White, will not be filled. The school board voted that the office be abolished, and that the duties of the office be divided among the other officers of the public schools organization and a saving made to the city. The salary was $1,500.

NONA M'ADDO, who tells of experiences nursing French wounded.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Miss Nona Maddox, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, in letters home, tells of her experiences as a Red Cross nurse in the American Hospital at Paris, now filled with wounded French soldiers.

There are hundreds of wounded in the hospital," says Miss Maddox. "It now occupies several buildings taken for hospital quarters and equipped with improvised appliances early in the war to meet the enormous demand made on the French government and the Red Cross auxiliaries by the fearful extent of the casualties resulting from the continuous fighting along the western battle front."

"The number of wounded so far exceeded the capacity of the hospitals three months ago and so taxed the endurance of surgeons and nurses that thousands of wounded men lay without medical attention some times for a week."

Miss Maddox describes conditions as much improved today, although the demands made on the hospitals are so great that hours of duty for nurses are long and the work is very hard.

COLE URGES U. S. ARMY OF 600,000

Adjutant-General Charles H. Cole, before the executive council of the Massachusetts State Board of Trade at the Boston City Club, spoke of the "Cupressoidness of Our Staffs" and urged the business men to do everything in their power to induce their employees to join the militia. He advanced a mobile army of 600,000 men.

"The trained and disciplined American soldier," he said, "has the standard in our world, but the untrained, untrained man of any other country, in the world, and no match, individually or collectively, against trained soldiers, properly organized and properly led."

He said that the need for our first line of defense is a mobile army of 600,000 men, whom we should have sufficient to have, regulars and militia to number less than 150,000, or whom 7,500 are officers.

A modern battleship of one of the European navies could lie in Narragansett Bay, and the Bunker Hill Monument, the Custom House Tower, and the State House as targets, plus the whole city of Boston, and we could not a gun in our forts could reach it."

Judge Rules Against Admission of Complete Bain Report on "Graft" Inquiry.

ture in 1912 and again in 1913. Mr. Roosevelt said he was made chairman of a legislative committee in 1912 to investigate the State Police.

"That investigation committee investigated anything?"

"No," he said. "I was made chairman of a committee to investigate the State Police, but we found nothing."

"Did you know anything about the State Police?"

"I suppose so," said Mr. Roosevelt, "as he crossed his foot over his knee and looked at his right arm as the judge asked him."

"You had two lawyers, and I left the law and to them."

"You did not participate yourself with the law on such things?"

"I have it on my mind," said Roosevelt, "because I know we did not do anything."

"How do you know substantial justice was done?" asked Judge.

"Because I did it," answered the Colonel, and there was an audible titter from the gallery.

"I'll clear the room if there is any more titter," said Judge Andrews, turning off the lights. Mr. Roosevelt then asked Roosevelt when he next ran for office.

JUSTICE WILLIAM ANDREWS, conducting Barnes-Roosevelt trial.

Roosevelt was a resident of Washington, D.C., and was in the city when the trial was held.

RECORDS SHIPPED.

Several trunks containing records covering State printing contracts and other data desired for the Barnes-Roosevelt trial were shipped from the office of State Comptroller Travis in Albany to Syracuse today.

This action was taken in compliance with an order from Justice Andrews.

Comptroller Travis had refused to send the records to Syracuse when he was subpoenaed, holding that original records could not be taken from his custody. This position was sustained by the state attorney general, who advised against the production of the records.

It was 1910 before Justice Andrews finally took up the case. Mr. Van Hook, for the defense, formally offered the Bain report. Mr. Van Hook offered the Bain report. Mr. Van Hook offered the Bain report.

levied tribute from the only other printing establishment in the capital. It alleged that Barnes was bound to pay from any printing done in Albany. The Barnes newspaper was made the State police, no report, during the period covered by the investigation, had $12,500 from the City of Albany, and $15,000 from the State of New York.

This latter was a double charge, said the report.

"CORRUPT BOSS."

The report accused Barnes of being the most conspicuous example of the corrupt boss in New York and demanded that the Senate do something to "break up the printing ring."

It declared that Barnes papers received money from the Albany Argus in return for printing contracts.

Printers bidding for contracts, the report said, had to pay Barnes from 15 to 25 per cent. of the amounts of their contracts.

Mr. Van Hook, for the defense, then read to the jury portions of a New York weekly magazine dealing with the Bain report. The report, he said, was the work of the City of Albany, and $15,000 from the State of New York.

ROOSEVELT CALLED 'GOD'S LIEUTENANT'

SYRACUSE, April 22.—William M. Irvine, chief counsel for William Barnes, Jr., who asked today how long he expected the Roosevelt libel trial to last, replied: "Only God Almighty and His lieutenant, Theodore Roosevelt, knows."

which Colonel Roosevelt sat talking with friends.

Mr. Barnes was back in the spectators seats with Mrs. Barnes. Among those waiting to testify who were called about the court room were Mr. Loeb and Senators Newcomb and Andrew, who, Roosevelt said, told him, via the Albany Argus, of the alleged combinations of the Albany Democrats and Barnes Republicans to control the Senate.

FOILED EFFORT TO INVADE ENGLAND

LONDON, April 22.—P. T. Jans, the well known naval expert, editor of the authoritative "Fighting Ships," addressing a meeting at Liverpool, said it was not generally known the Germans tried to land an expeditionary force in England and that it was the British navy that made them go back to harbor again.

"The navy saved the country," Mr. Jans declared, "and there was never a word of it in the newspapers."

Mr. Jans is one of the world's foremost naval writers and famous as the inventor of the Naval War Game. He has written many valuable books on naval topics, and is also an authority on motor and aviation.

Russians Use New Long Range Gun

By International News Service.

PETROGRAD, April 22.—A new and powerful rapid-fire gun, having a range of from eight to nine miles, is used by the Russians made it possible now being used by the Russian army, according to a semi-official statement issued here today. The weapon was first used in February, but its existence has been kept secret.

"New long-range, rapid-fire guns to inflict losses at a distance of eight miles on the enemy's rear in the region of Grodno in February," said the statement. "This artillery successfully bombarded the German general staff in the region of Sopotnik at a distance of nine miles."

BAIN FOR MAYOR.

"I am for Mayor of New York city," he said.

"As a Republican?"

"I was a Republican," Roosevelt replied, "but I was nominated by an independent citizens' committee."

"How did they nominate you?"

"I do not know," he said.

"Was he associated with you in the campaign?"

"I was mostly with Ethel Ross," was the answer.

"And you made Republican speeches?"

"Well, I was sort of Republican and I made speeches, said Mr. Roosevelt.

"How did the election come out?"

"It was defeated," was the low reply.

Mr. Roosevelt then told of his various times on his Montana ranch and about his two years as a police commissioner in New York.

He paid taxes in Oyster Bay, but could not remember whether he paid taxes in New York city. He said he lived in New York while police commissioner.

He said he lived in Washington in 1910, but still paid Oyster Bay taxes. Are you prepared to swear definitely that you paid taxes in Oyster Bay in 1910?" asked Mr. Irvine.

"I am," was the answer.

The Colonel identified a fax note exhibited by Mr. Irvine. Mr. Irvine read to the jury an affidavit made by Roosevelt May 1, 1917, in Washington, and sent to the New York tax commissioner. In the affidavit the Colonel swore he did not live in New York city and owned no property there and did not vote there.

READS CONSTITUTION.

Mr. Irvine then produced the Constitution of New York State and offered in evidence Section 2, Article 4, in which it is provided that men eligible for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor must be citizens of the United States and residents in the State for five years.

"When you became acquainted with Mr. Irvine that came from the Spanish-American war in 1898," said the Colonel.

Mr. Irvine then introduced the commission issued to Roosevelt May 1, 1918, making him a lieutenant-colonel in the U. S. Army.

German Staff to Intrigue for Peace, Declares Bennett

By ARNOLD BENNETT.

LONDON, April 22.—The German staff must by this time have given up hope of victory. They must have noticed that in numbers, guns, munitions and brains they are slowly being surpassed. Their eternal boasting and reiteration of the lie that they did not want the war must eventually be disintegrating their fortitude.

The political conduct of the real rulers, who are the heads of the army, has for years past proved them at once far and despite the protestations. What the proletariat of rulers we know by the full printed records of Germany's political life, and the secret intrigues of the great German staff has not been able to fall back upon when its armies turn over so little back toward Berlin.

Its armies must and soon will turn. Even if they should not, the British navy is slowly stifling the commercial life of the nation and nothing Germany can do can save that pressure. What then will the great general staff do?

Its program can be predicted with certainty. It will be to bring about a peace which excludes the restoration and composition of the German staff, which excludes many of the best of the German staff, and which excludes the German military staff by means of a European concordat against war.

Fist Fight Follows Lynn License Vote

Lynn License Commissioners today announced the liquor license for the year beginning May 1. Of the thirty-one licenses, twenty-seven were renewed, four others were issued to new applicants at old locations and one new license, given again, was renewed. Four others were issued to new applicants at old locations and one new license, given again, was renewed.

After the announcement, Richard J. Hannon, not liking the findings, followed Chairman Thomas J. Corbett out of City Hall and told him so. As Hannon fell for his club, dozen other officers jumped on Hannon, and he was arrested for drunkenness and assaulting an officer.

WILLARD'S LIFE STORY Has Received But One Injury in Ring AS TOLD BY HIMSELF

By ED W. SMITH.
Well Known Fight Reporter and Ring Analyst.

Herewith is presented the ninth installment of Jess Willard's story of his own life, "How I Won the Championship." The first installment appeared in the AMERICAN of Tuesday, April 22.

His story covers the Kansas City's private and ring life completely from his birth up to and including his now famous Boston bout.

HOW I WON THE TITLE—No. 9

As told by Jess Willard, heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

Single good fortune has followed me in most of my contests. Only once was I seriously injured in a contest and that I can account for by lack of experience. This accident occurred in the sixth fight I had in the ring and brought me a broken knuckle. The injury has since healed nicely, and I believe that knuckle is stronger now than before. I was hurt because I was caused by our having too small gloves—at least the gloves were too small for my hands.

These were the only ones we had and I didn't had to use them. I quit quite a struggle my seconds managed to get the gloves on and then I could not close my fist completely.

Just cutting the gloves on the inside, but everybody was afraid the fight, so I let it go as it was.

Learned Everything He Knew Himself.

My opponent was Bert Schiller, a pretty fair first of fighter, but he was not one of the big ones. He hit me in the fourth round. But when they finally got the gloves off my hands, it was found that the first knuckle was broken. That taught me a good lesson, and now I have no more trouble in getting my gloves on. I was told that I had been punched out, but I never had an experienced fighter to teach me anything. Somehow I have learned to get the right sort of a man to go with me in my campaign. Usually this was because I could not afford to pay the prize that I wanted for my services. In the main I have had trouble enough getting money enough together that would carry me along without being in high priced men. I hope better times are dawning soon.

Put Up Worst Exhibition Against George Rodol.

The result of this was that I had to learn most everything I knew myself. Some of it I learned all wrong and had to undo a lot of it after I got back to my home, which was in St. Paul, when I first started training for Jim Savage, Walter Monahan and fellows or some, while working in the city of St. Paul.

I have seen in one camp. To them I owe much.

Probably the worst exhibition I ever put up in my entire career was that against George Rodol in Milwaukee, and this to my great chagrin came at a time when I wanted to show the Chicago critics what a good man I was.

That was one time I lost my head in the face of a hostile crowd.

It was one time I lost my head in the face of a hostile crowd. It happened in a peculiar way. For while a big man as the ordinary heavyweight goes, looked like a child in the ring alongside of me, and he reached the end of the first round and the smaller man or "small" man as I called him, he got back to my corner at the end of the first round. I was told that they'll get "buddy" for me, I said to Jim Jones, "Just what I tried to do to them. I was wrong for it afterwards and the farther I went the madder I got, and everybody knows that a fighter can't be anything near his best when he is madder."

Does Not Care for City Life at all.

It is because due to the fact that the city life, "buddy" of the big cities did not like me that I became averse to city life. As a matter of fact I don't care for city life at all, and when I am retired will settle back out some quiet country spot to live.

At last I have been able to get an abundant amount of city life, and I have been able to get it.

AN OLD RECIPE TO PARENK HAIR

Common garden Sage and Sulphur make streaked, faded or gray hair dark and glossy at once.

Almost everyone knows that Sage and Sulphur, properly compounded, bring back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 10 cents. Everybody uses this compound. It is a recipe, because no one can possibly tell you that you are wrong. It is a fact, because it is so natural and so simple. You can draw this mixture through your hair, making one small gray hair disappear, and after a few days you will find your hair has become beautifully dark, thick and glossy. Try it now. You'll be young again.—Advertisement.

The Prairie Dog, the Rattlesnake and the Owl All Live in the Same Burrow

But the Prairie Dog Doesn't Live There VERY LONG, Which Supplies a Useful Lesson in the Choice of Companions

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Columnist.

You have probably seen pictures of prairie dog towns in the West, with a rattlesnake wriggling into a burrow and an owl just emerging from the back door, while the prairie dogs are sitting up on their haunches with the benign look of genial hosts.

It all seems like a very happy family. Many writers who pass through prairie dog towns in their travels speak of this as a wonderful instance of animal companionship and friendliness, and declare that if human beings could get along with other human beings as nicely as these various animals get along together all would be well with the human race.

Now the truth about these mixed communities is that they are not happy families at all, but merely banquets in which the little prairie dogs figure as the meat course.

If you dig into one of the burrows you will find live snakes, there and live owls, but not live prairie dogs. Some of the hosts of the occasion will be quietly digesting in the interior of the rattlesnakes, others will be partly picked to pieces by the owls.

And very often you will find a rattlesnake whose eyes have been dug out by the razor-like beak of an owl, or an owl that has been bitten to death by the snake in the fight for possession of a disputed prairie dog.

The prairie dog is not an unintelligent animal. He would vastly prefer to pick his own house guests, and if he did he would not select owls and rattlesnakes.

But he is little and weak, and he has no choice.

When there is time he scuttles out of the back door of his house and lets the intruders make themselves at home as best they may. But usually he gets caught at the end of a blind burrow, and after that you will never see him sitting on his hill and wabbling his nose in the sunshine.

It is the misfortune of the prairie dog that he cannot pick his company or choose the people that are to be admitted to his home. The selection of associates is a very important matter.

When you can consult your own interests about it you cannot be too careful, for there are plenty of human owls and rattlesnakes who will invite themselves to your table and make themselves your companions if you give them half a chance.

Most people live in houses that are very much more substantial than the hutsches of the prairie dogs and are well provided with doors and locks to keep out undesirable.

But the snakes and owls find ways to get in far too often, and after a temporary appearance of a happy family the usual tragedy supplies material for the last chapter.

We would suggest to parents who are never sure just whom their children are associating with, and who know nothing whatever about the friends they bring home, that they should devote a little thought to this prairie dog story.

It is easy enough, at the beginning, to be sure about the associations of a growing boy or girl.

It is very hard to break dangerous friendships after they are formed. Let a boy pick his friends among the crowd that are trying to cultivate all the many vices, and he soon will fall a victim to bits that will make him a loser, if not a criminal. The boy who is not kept busy at honest work will soon be busy at dishonest work, and become the prey of the big crooks who are always looking for little and weak crooks to do the actual stealing and serve the prison terms.

The girl who is allowed to make companions of vain and flirtatious young women and of idle, worthless men is put in a position of great peril.

The man now under indictment for debauching another man's wife and driving her to the murder of her two children was one of the rattlesnakes that once lived in one of those "happy families."

It would have been easy to keep him out. But he wasn't kept out and a pitiful tragedy resulted.

Men and women are the guardians of their own homes able to defend them against invasion of every kind. They owe it to themselves and to their children to keep them safeguarded against the human rattlesnakes and owls that come only to destroy.

There is no such thing as absolute independence in this world. All people are profoundly influenced by those with whom they associate either for good or bad.

There is nothing a father can teach his son or a mother can teach her daughter as important as wise choice of companions. It is little trouble to tell the beasts of prey from the honest and genuinely friendly, and the distinction cannot be made too soon.

SPRING'S SONG

By ANN LITTLE

BROWN the earth and dead "death mark of winter skies,
Till the glow of a Springtime morning bids life, "Awake! Arise!"
Old miracles made new the world can still devise,
When up thru the mold peeps the crocus bell,
And the fledgling swallow flies.
Dell my life and ere where buried memory lies,
And my scarred heart beats the morning's cold "death yearning skies,
But miracles the dawn of Springtime still must prize—
For into the night steals a gleam of light,
In the smile of your friendly eyes.
Crocus, tulip, daffodil—your cups raise to the skies;
A glow in your stirring hearts where your golden pollen lies.
Work your miracle, oh Springtime—boldly when winter dies,
And warm, oh heart, to do your part—
The night is over, Arise!

Earning a Living

By ELBERT HUBBARD

By ELBERT HUBBARD
I AM fully convinced that the most important thing in the world is Earning a Living.
And there is a difference between Earning a Living and getting a living.
You can get a living in several ways—borrow, beg, steal, by hook or crook—mostly crook.
But when it comes to Earning a Living, you turn the trick in just one way and no other—you work.
And the more intelligent and love you put in your work the bigger your reward.
And congenial work—work you do through choice—the joyous work, and joyous work is just play.
In the country, when we talk about a boy or girl Earning a Living, we mean that the person is performing a needed service for some one.
If you "work for yourself" it means that you are producing something which the world needs, and that in return for the product you are paid money.

And money is the symbol of value—the token of a service rendered.
I remember when I was about ten years old coming home one day with a dollar bill.
I proudly showed the money to my mother.
She looked at the money in astonishment—for money was a curiosity in that family—and then she looked at me.
"Where did you get that money?" she asked, somewhat severely.
And I answered proudly: "I earned it."
"How did you earn it?"
"Why, Haven's cattle broke into the corn, and I got on a horse, went and found Old Man Haven, and we drove the cattle back in the pasture and fixed the fence. And he said if I hadn't seen the steers and helped get 'em back they might have foundered—so he gave me a dollar."
And my mother kissed me and asked: "But are you sure you earned that much?" And I assured her that all the steers would then be dead were it not for me.
In my boyhood I earned money by picking berries, hoing potatoes, husking corn, herding cattle, driving hogs, working on the threshing machine, carrying water to harvest hands, shingling roofs, tending mason—carrying messages to church.
And for these services rendered men paid me money.
Of course, I didn't know I was getting an education—that was unearned increment—Survival! Labor there is a return beyond the money.

The money is tangible gratitude, and must be paid. But the money isn't all.
To earn a living is the natural and safe way of utilizing human energy.
Life is energy focused and individualized.
Human energy wrongly used is vice and crime.
Vice is direct injury to yourself.
Crime is direct injury to society.
Both tend to disease, dissolution, death.
Work tends to health, happiness, progress, prosperity.
And he it knows that health, happiness, progress and prosperity are all not only contagious but infectious.
All good things are "catching." Life is motion. You keep good things by giving them away.

Inklings and Thinklings

Maine court decides that it's right for a man to tell his wife she dresses like a chorus girl. All very well, but how if the wife decides it isn't?
Husband angry because any time he wouldn't get out of bed and fetch his wife a cigarette, she wouldn't give him any breakfast the following morning. Seems fair enough; easier to get a cigarette than to fry the bacon and eggs.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox
Calls Scolding Husband
Wrecker of Own Home

Man Should Be as Tactful and Patient with His Wife as with His Business Partner, She Says

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

NOT long ago a tired little woman committed suicide because her husband scolded her.
He came home late at night and found her employed in labor which seemed to him suitable for the morning hours, and he spoke angrily about her tardy habits. She flung herself from the window and died in the hospital soon afterward.

There seems to be a mixture of the pathetic, the tragic and the absurd in all this.
It was a small thing to cause a wife to sacrifice her life—just a man's irritable criticism. But we must take into consideration all that preceded this occasion.
There had been scolding after scolding, without doubt. She had been found fault with for so many derelictions, for so many deeds done and undone, that this final criticism was merely the last straw on the camel's back.

A cross, faultfinding wife is a terrible being; but a man can take his hat and go to the club or to the corner grocery when his tongue becomes too aggressive.
When the husband comes home and scolds the air of the house blue, there is nothing for a wife to do but to submit or jump out of the window.

The wife who died in the hospital had submitted for many years, undoubtedly; and then, finding that submission did not better matters, she decided to end it all. It would have been wiser to have walked out. It is more discreet to go into highways of earth uninvited than to enter by such means into the mysterious realm of death.

The man or woman who commits suicide is a spiritual pauper. He who has spiritual strength knows he will be added to the end, and waits his call. But the spiritual pauper declares himself a bankrupt when he ends his own earth existence.

We know there are homes for paupers in this world. We do not know what provision is made for them in the next.

It is always well to go into a new land with a full purse, and it is well to enter the next world with a good supply of spiritual wealth and not as a bankrupt.

Meantime, there is the scolding husband to carry his remorseful heart through life. It is good enough for him and yet we cannot help pitying him.
He is so sorry he said what he did, he never dreamed of doing so, so differently! He would understand her so much better and be so much better if she were alive today.

Sometimes the only way a wife can make her husband understand her is to die. Then he sees and admires all her sweet, tender qualities.

I like to think the world is peopled with happy wives and husbands. I know many. Many more exist unknown to me. Happiness is oftentimes secretive and quiet; misery is noisy and communicative. Happiness seeks no confidant; unhappiness wants to be sympathized with.

Happiness thanks God in the silence. Misery cries aloud to the world! And so we go to think that unhappiness is the rule, and happiness the exception. But I do not believe it.

Still, in this overall world and "overcivilized" state of society there are hundreds of unhappy wives to be found; wives who feel often on the verge of acts as desperate as that of the poor little woman who forms the subject of this sketch, and husbands who are as blindly thoughtless and as unkind as the one whose terrible words drove her to her death.

If you who read these lines are a man and a husband, ask yourself just what you are doing toward making your home the peaceful place a home should be. What are you doing to render your wife happy and the happy of the house each evening? Are you praising her for every good quality she possesses and thanking her for all her efforts to please you?

Are you telling her she is a good wife and a good mother, or are you finding fault with every small failure of hers and ignoring her great virtues?

Do not imagine a good woman is satisfied with virtue's own reward. The consciousness of her own worth is not sufficient to keep her happy if you are silent and never seek to impress upon her mind the fact that you realize her good qualities. And this is especially true if you take every opportunity to assure her that you see her faults.

Why not study your wife as you study your partner? Why not be as tactful and as patient with her as you are with him? Why not entertain and amuse her as you do your customers and patrons.

If you called at your neighbor's house and found anything amiable, how suave and amiable you would be about it. Are you kinder when things go amiss at your own home?

If not, why not?
How can a wife or husband be more thoughtful of outsiders than they are of each other? How can they be ill-tempered and fault-finding with each other and yet conciliatory to strangers?
The real business of life is the making of a happy home. Everything else is secondary to that; for, when you come to it, the whole of existence, everything goes to the winds but the happiness we have at home.

THE PAGAN

By JANE McLEAN

I DO not need the magic note
Atop the wild wild's thrill;
The spendthrift purple, dim, remote,
That hangs upon the hill;
The bird thrill of a song half sung.
High in the beech tree bare,
To feel my heart is passing young,
And know the world is fair.
Has earth a gladder color than
The ardent of her eyes;
A merrier hill of music than
The note her laughter hears?
Can Spring itself an odor bring
An musky as her hair?
Then it is not so strange a thing
That I should worship there.
